

Why should we research the social studies education in Asia?

Proposed Special Issue for Journal of Social Studies Education in Asia

The Journal of Social Studies Education in Asia (JSSEA) aims to make connections among the international fields of social studies education in Asia. JSSEA focuses on general trends and major shifts in curriculum and pedagogy, policy, and practices of students and teachers regarding social studies education in Asian countries. As the impact of globalization is felt at local, national, regional, and international levels, so the role of social studies education and citizenship education is gradually changing in each context of Asia. JSSEA stimulates innovation and debate, promotes theoretical development in the field, and encourages reflective practice.

As the first issues, this special issues will address how various types of social studies have been delivered in Asian Countries in order to show the future possibilities of research and practice of social studies. Topic areas include, Social Studies, History and Geography Education, Political Education, Global and International Education and Citizenship Education.
